Trump Says Tehran ‘Sending Very Nasty Signals’

U.S. President Donald Trump, speaking during a news conference in Scotland beside United Kingdom Prime Minister Keir Starmer, said that Tehran was “sending very bad signals, very nasty signals.” He continued, “And they shouldn’t be doing that. We wiped out their nuclear possibilities. They can start again. If they do, we’ll wipe it out faster than you can wave your finger at it. We will do that gladly, openly and gladly.”

In response, Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi said on X: “If aggression is repeated, we will not hesitate to react in a more decisive manner and in a way that will be IMPOSSIBLE to cover up...Yes, our enrichment facilities are severely damaged, but our DETERMINATION IS NOT.”

President Trump also said Tehran may be stonewalling Gaza ceasefire talks, stating, “I think they got involved in this negotiation, telling Hamas and giving Hamas signals and orders. And that’s not good. That’s not good.”

Foreign Ministry Spokesman Baghaei rejected President Trump's claim, calling it "a form of deflection and evasion of responsibility aimed at covering up the direct role of the U.S. in the crimes committed by Israel against the Palestinian people."

Violence Near Northwest, Southeast Borders Intensifies

The Baloch militant group Jaysh al-Adl, designated as a terror group by the United States, claimed responsibility for an assault on a judiciary complex in the southeastern city of Zahedan, Sistan-Baluchestan Province, located near the border with Pakistan.
